Multi-sensory learning through reading any simple story.
With Eva Grayzel

Engage imaginations through spontaneous interactive techniques. This innovative method addresses all learning styles. Make the usual passive 'story time', an active experience by involving the listeners physically to create the illustration. Introduce math concepts, science facts, vocabulary (even in a second language), in addition to social skills, life values, and coping strategies. Facilitate recall, boost self-esteem, and to top it all off, gain a new perspective on your students learning abilities with Eva's hands-on engaging system for self-expression within the context of a story. Fun, educational, and effective with NO prep time for the educator! Powerful tools for empowering students.

The workshop will be held at the Northampton Community College's Fowler Family Southside Center, in room 625, located at 511 East Third Street, Bethlehem, PA. (Not the Banana Factory, keep going.) Free parking.
